Arcadia
TIMELINE
Arcadia - City of the Santa Anita - was once the site of a peaceful Native American village. Situated by a natural lake, nestled among spreading oaks and below towering mountains, it was called Aleupkigna, land of many waters. The Spanish plan to convert the natives ended their stone age culture. The mission era followed and lasted until the lands were taken and granted to Mexican citizens. One of the parcels called Santa Anita, an agricultural outpost of the Mission San Gabriel, was granted to Hugo Reid. Subsequently, it was E. J. "Lucky" Baldwin who transformed it into a showplace and founded the city in
